Give Up Our Guns?

One writer thinks he's stumbled upon the secret to persuading millions of Americans.

Lewis Morris

A well-armed citizenry is perhaps the single biggest bulwark against tyrannical government, and therefore the biggest obstacle to the Left's goal of subverting and remaking America as a socialist worker's paradise.

Leftists have been working for years to chisel away at our Second Amendment rights. Their most favored tactic is gun control, creating more restrictive regulations and outlawing certain types of firearms. Obfuscation and lying are also popular, driving home their anti-gun message with twisted statistics and creative reinterpretations of the Second Amendment topping the list. And now, they are resorting to shame.

David Frum, who once dabbled in right-of-center politics as a speechwriter for President George W. Bush, has written a predictably shoddy hit piece for The Atlantic on how to persuade Americans to give up their guns. Good luck with that.

Frum's assessment is that gun owners can be convinced to give up their guns if they are shamed into thinking that gun ownership is socially unacceptable, much like the movements to reduce smoking and drunk driving. The problem with this equation is that smoking and drunk driving are deliberately destructive behaviors whose outcome, while not foreordained, is heavily weighted toward reduced health and death. Only someone who was rabidly anti-gun in the first place would believe that owning a firearm automatically falls into the same category.

Frum is clearly anti-gun, using scare quotes around the words "responsible" and "law abiding" when describing the vast majority of gun owners. By doing so, he is stating that he does not believe there is such a thing as a responsible gun owner, that a person's ability to think clearly goes out the window the moment they come into possession of a firearm. If this is what stands for objective thinking, who needs bias?

His argument is tailor-made for The Atlantic's left-leaning readership, chock-full of snide comments about the nature of gun owners — troglodytes who stand in the way of social progress. He also engages in one of the Left's favorite sports by spinning facts and spreading anecdotes as evidence to support his specious claims.

Chief among Frum's argument is that gun violence is on the rise because there are so many guns. This may be an easy sell to the uninformed, but it's a statement that falls apart rather quickly. A study funded by anti-gun groups found that the rise in gun purchases since the beginning of the pandemic is not associated with the rise in "gun violence" during that same period. As we have stated before, it is defunding and reducing police presence on America's streets that has led to the rise in crime. The Left loves to talk about systemic problems — how about Democrats' systemic disregard for American law enforcement?

Frum also shares several anecdotes about children killed with their parents' guns, suicides, and simple altercations that escalated into fatal shootings. These stories are terribly sad, but they are not the norm among law-abiding gun owners. The NRA's Institute for Legislative Action points out fatal firearm accidents involving children have dropped 91% since 1975. The rate of firearm accidents overall has also dropped significantly. And let's not forget about the historic drop in crime across the board for three decades leading up to 2019, which, again, was when leftist city councils started defunding local police forces.

The all-knowing Frum wants his readers to believe that guns don't deter violence. His proof is that we hear more negative stories about guns in the news than positive ones. But John Lott, who is much more astute on the topic than Frum ever could be, debunked that myth years ago. News programs love to share bad news, and many people love to watch it. Deaths and shootings are easier to quantify in this context. There is no real way to measure how the mere sight of a firearm deters crime. Rest assured, it does. Criminals don't roam the countryside looking to get into gunfights; they are looking for easy prey, and that is generally the unarmed individual.

Ultimately, this insipid work of Frum carries the same erroneous assumptions about guns that the Left has pushed for years. He's also writing for his audience, fellow leftists who see guns as evil. There is no new ground being discovered here, and Frum is unlikely to shame Americans into rethinking their right to defend themselves. But we must remain vigilant of our rights, for David Frum and his comrades will continue to push the issue no matter how illogical their arguments may be.

LIBERTY NOTES

By Kevin L. Jamison

It is a Good Day for Liberty.

Levi-Straus has taken time off from making blue jeans to determine the cause of violence in our society. They decided the cause of violence was us; the people who do not commit violence. If they make such poor decisions, what quality of blue jeans are they making?

There is a movement to impeach President Biden. The opposing argument is; "President Kamala Harris."

The US military is experimenting with an RFID tracker device embedded in weapons. It costs thousands of dollars. The idea is to prevent military weapons from being stolen and to make inventories easier. I was an arms room officer in the old days and when firearms went in or out of an arms room the serial number had to be checked by hand. The entire arms room had to be checked by hand periodically. I remember when all the hundreds of serial numbers in the arms room had to be typed out without a mistake and without erasures. This system will erase all this. The problem is that the enemy can read these gadgets too. Hackers have discovered that very basic, low-powered electronics can read these gadgets at a range of 210 feet. The enemy could do so at several miles. The Marines have rejected the system out of hand. The rest of the military should follow. It really should. So this leaves the electronics firm looking for a market for their gadget. I can see the current administration demanding it be put in our guns. Did I mention it costs thousands of dollars?

Hospitals are experiencing a critical shortage of blood. I went to donate wearing my "Guns Save Lives" button and reading a gun magazine. This may have influenced the two or three people I encountered. It may have nudged them to believe that we are the good guys. Every little bit helps.

In Philadelphia persons caught with guns going through TSA checkpoints are having their license to carry revoked. The want to do this everywhere, it requires the cooperation of the sheriff. I do not think they can legally do so in Missouri.

The remains of Father Emil Kapaun have come home to Wichita Kansas. He was a chaplain during the Korean War. He was reported to have carried wounded to safety under fire. When his unit was cut off the commander ordered that everyone who could walk was going over a mountain to safety; a psychopath decision to save some. Father Kapaun volunteered to stay behind with the wounded. In the prison camp he stole food and medicine for other prisoners, repaired clothing and kept up morale. He fell ill and went to the "hospital" from which no prisoner returned. He was buried in a mass grave. President Trump's efforts to civilize the North Korean dictator resulted in a number of remains being returned. Father Kapaun was one of them. He was awarded the Medal of Honor for his actions in the POW camp. The Catholic Church is considering him for sainthood. This is well off topic, but he is a hero and possibly a saint. If there is serious objection I can be impeached; or bring pitchforks and torches to the next general membership meeting.

Mark McCloskey and his wife became famous for facing off a mob in front of their St. Louis home. They were charged with felonies by the Soros supported prosecutor. They pled to misdemeanors. Now Mr. McCloskey's law license has been suspended for six months. He made comments after sentencing that what he did was right and he would do it again. The disciplinary committee considered this contempt of court. There are many reasons that a person might plead to a crime they did not commit. I discourage it but it is the client's decision. A defendant might be faced with the decision of pleading guilty and being released with time served, or pleading innocent and remaining in jail for months until trial. A person may want to get a case behind him. Mr. McCloskey is running for office and appearing in court would be a distraction. Sometimes the plea offer is simply too good to turn down; a bird in the hand decision. The incident shows that surviving the gunfight, the criminal case and the lawsuit are not the end of troubles we can face.

Barry Goldwater said, "Extremism in the defense of liberty is no vice. Moderation in the pursuit of justice is no virtue."

When the "Go Green" bunch flaunt their moral superiority tell them about the Pittman-Roberson Act. Sportsmen lobbied to have a tax on firearms and ammunition to support conservation. The fee for a hunting license goes to the Department of Conservation. The money they give to animal groups goes to salaries and conventions. If they really love animals they should buy a box of bullets and a hunting license.

Governor Parson has suggested that the Second Amendment Preservation Act could use some tweaking. This worries me. Once they start tweaking it will be hard to make them stop.

The administration wants the IRS to monitor any and every bank transaction over $600. Banks say they can't do this, privacy advocates say they don't want this. The response was to propose raising the amount to $10,000. I still object.

I've seen an ad narrated by former president Clinton. It says that the NRA has twisted the words of the founding fathers. It says that the NRA performed a service in the old days but is now extremist. It claims that the NRA believes the lives of innocent people are the price we pay for freedom. I don't think anyone in the NRA ever said that. This is not the first time the usual suspects have made things up about us. It appears to be a promotion for a film called "The Price of Freedom." The price of freedom is putting up with slanders like this.

The Second Amendment Foundation is producing advertisements in critical states. It is unfortunate that they can only afford critical states. They could use some contributions.

I read an article about a morbidly obese woman being booked into jail. They put her through a scanner and found that he had concealed a Colt .25 automatic in the folds of her skin. She picked up a new charge for attempting to smuggle a weapon into a jail. This is a mildly amusing event and somewhat gross. It got me thinking. It has been a long time since I read about someone being arrested for carrying a concealed weapon. I have read about people being arrested for openly carrying a weapon. This is quite a change. And we did it. We are faced with the need to continue the struggle just to keep what we have. To improve what we have we shall have to redouble the struggle.

Actor Alec Baldwin was filming a western movie. For one scene he was handed a gun and told it was unloaded. He believed this. From reports it appears the crew members had been plinking with the gun and left a live round in it. A woman was killed and a man wounded with the single round. An experienced gun owner would have checked the gun when it was handed to him. An experienced gun handler would have checked it before handing it to him. The incident has brought up stories of actors killed with gun left with a bullet lodged in the barrel and propelled out by the blank cartridge and actors killed with blank ammunition. Old West reenactors know of men injured in fast draw exhibitions when they fire before the revolver leaves the holster. Steel lined holsters have been blown open by blanks and long ugly wounds gouged down the leg. Civil War reenactors know to aim their muskets above their opponents' heads. Even in the Army, with blank adaptors that completely cover the barrel we were told not to aim at opposing forces. This incident has inspired calls to ban real guns in movies and TV. I am in favor of safety measures, but while they are banning real guns we could be affected.

In the words of two great time travelers, "Be excellent to each other!"
We shall overcome.

Camden County Becomes Missouri's First Second Amendment Sanctuary County

On January 19, 2021, Camden County, Missouri Commissioners passed Missouri's first Second Amendment Sanctuary Ordinance. One interesting aspect of this ordinance, aside from it actually being an ordinance in the first place, is the fact that they are actually calling out all "laws, orders, rules and regulations, whether past, present, or future, which infringe on the people's right to keep and bear arms." This is a bold step and not one that we have seen many other counties make. They are not only declaring their opposition to future infringements to the Second Amendment but also ones from the past.

All federal acts, laws, orders, rules, and regulations, whether past, present, or future, which infringe on the people's right to keep and bear arms as guaranteed by the Second Amendment to the United States Constitution and Article I, Section 23 of the Missouri Constitution shall be invalid in this county, shall not be recognized by this county, are specifically rejected by this county, and shall be considered null and void and of no effect in this county.

Such federal acts, laws, orders, rules, and regulations include, but are not limited to:

- (a) The provisions of the federal Gun Control Act of 1934;
- (b) The provisions of the federal Gun Control Act of 1968;
- (c) Any tax, levy, fee, or stamp imposed on firearms, firearm accessories, or ammunition not common to all other goods and services which could have a chilling effect on the purchase or ownership of those items by law-abiding citizens;
- (d) Any registering or tracking of firearms, firearm accessories, or ammunition which could have a chilling effect on the purchase or ownership of those items by law-abiding citizens;
- (e) Any registering or tracking of the owners of firearms, firearm accessories, or ammunition which could have a chilling effect on the purchase or ownership of those items by law-abiding citizens;
- (f) Any act forbidding the possession, ownership, or use or transfer of any type of firearm, firearm accessory, or ammunition by law-abiding citizens;
- (g) Any act ordering the confiscation of firearms, firearm accessories, or ammunition from law-abiding citizens

BIT BY BIT

K. L. Jamison

I remember watching the news with Dad. A talking head predicted that the price of sugar would go up a penny a pound. Dad groaned as if wounded. I asked why that was a problem. Dad manufactured ice cream. When you buy sugar by the ton it adds up quickly,

Every little thing adds up. We have a member who throws a quarter in a coffee can whenever he hears a lie about gun owners or guns. He donates the proceeds to WMSA. At the last meeting he donated $127.50; a significant amount amassed a quarter at a time. Added to the efforts of other members it keeps us going. Everyone can do as much.

A quarter a day is affordable. A letter to the editor is something. A letter to a friend or relative may produce a vote for our side. A few hours working our table at a gun show can accomplish a lot and is a pleasant experience.

There is an old saying that just because one cannot do everything is not an excuse for doing nothing. It is also not an excuse that other people are doing a great deal. There are a number of people in our movement who have done a great deal for a long time. We need fresh blood. We do not need a lot of fresh blood but every little bit helps.

We need a couple of people to fold and mail our newsletter every month. We need someone with a modicum of internet savvy to help monitor our web site. We have an expert to lead the way; we only need someone to assist. Our gun show coordinators have done yeoman service in promoting us at monthly gun shows. They could use some reinforcement. It is a matter of sitting at a table and distributing literature for a few hours once a month. Someone can write letters to the editor, call in to talk radio or the like. Every little bit helps.

Raising money is always needed. Distributing literature to neighborhood gun shops helps raise our profile and gets us members. If the shop will put out a begging bowl for us that helps too.

A list of potential supporters for political campaigns is easy. So are locations for political signs; yard signs and large signs. These efforts are appreciated by politicians and demonstrate how good a group of friends we can be. It is easy to make friends with politicians.

Contributing a penny for every pound of sugar consumed can be a basic goal; and surprisingly easy to reach.

New Gun Control Bill Takes Aim at Online Firearms Marketplaces

U.S. Senator Dianne Feinstein (D-CA), one of the most prolific gun control advocates in the U.S. Senate, has teamed up with Sen. Richard "Dick" Blumenthal (D-CT) to push a new anti-gun bill through Congress. When Dick isn't making up stories about serving in Vietnam, he's out looking to restrict your fundamental rights. It makes perfect sense why he and Sen. Feinstein would collaborate on Senate Bill 2725. The bill, also known as the Accountability for Online Firearms Marketplaces Act, targets peaceful gun owners who use modern tools, such as a virtual marketplace, for buying, selling, and trading firearms, parts, and ammunition.

According to a press release put out by Sen. Feinstein, the goal of this legislation is clear. "In enacting Section 230, Congress did not intend to grant a sweeping liability shield to all companies, including firearms marketplaces, merely because they operate in cyberspace," the statement read in part. So basically, Section 230 was meant for other companies, just not those companies that are in the firearms business. Got it!

This bill was only recently introduced, despite being promoted for weeks, so the time to hit back against this legislation is NOW

We thank you in advance for your engagement on this pressing issue. As you can see from the fall of Chipman, our outreach matters. Elections are approaching and those in elected office do not want to take hard votes ahead of primaries and the general election. So let's make some noise and let's beat back another legislative leviathan together! FPC continues to proudly serve as your advocate for "All the Rights. All the Time."

Contact Senators Josh Hawley and Roy Blunt to express your opinion on this bill.
