

Congressional Gun-Banners Introduce Extremist Federal Gun License Bill

A trio of perennial Capitol Hill gun banners have introduced legislation that would require American citizens to obtain a federal license from the Department of Justice before they could buy or receive a firearm, with periodic mandatory re-licensing and training.

New Jersey Democrat Senators Cory [Sparticus] Booker and Bob Menendez, and Connecticut Democrat Sen. Richard Blumenthal are behind the 11-page measure, dubbed the “Federal Firearm Licensing Act.”

As noted by Politico, “The DOJ license would require both a written firearm safety test and hands-on training, a criminal background check and submission of fingerprints and proof of identity. The license would only be available to people over 21 years of age, essentially raising the age of gun ownership to 21.”

The bill would amend Chapter 44 of Title 18. Right upfront, the legislation states, “it shall be unlawful for any individual to purchase or receive a firearm unless the individual has a valid Federal firearm license.”

But there is more, and it is disturbing.

“The Attorney General shall issue or deny a license under this section not later than 30 days after the date on which the application for such license is received.

“Each license issued under this section shall be valid for the purchase of a single firearm, which shall be purchased not later than 30 days after the date on which the license is issued.”

In two paragraphs, the Booker-Blumenthal-Menendez bill reduces a constitutionally-protected fundamental right to the level of heavily-regulated government privilege. Proof of that is underscored by a remark from Booker in his press release, in which he compares the right to keep and bear arms to driving a car, which is not mentioned anywhere in the Bill of Rights.

“This bill moves us in the right direction and is based on a simple concept – if you need a license to drive a car, you should need one to buy and possess a gun,” Booker stated.

The anti-gun trio figures to capitalize on the tragic May 14th, 2022 shooting at a Tops supermarket in Buffalo, N.Y.

The New York Times is reporting that with the current 50-50 makeup of the Senate, restrictive gun control legislation doesn’t have much of a chance to advance, however. In the aftermath of the Buffalo shooting, “Democrats on Capitol Hill were publicly conceding that their paper-thin majority in the Senate meant there was little they would be able to do to prevent the next tragedy,” the NY Times acknowledged.

Quoting anti-gun Democrat Sen. Richard Durbin of Illinois, the report said Durbin admitted, “We’re kind of stuck where we are, for the time being.”

Durbin, who chairs the Senate Judiciary Committee, reportedly was “playing down the chance that even a modest bill to strengthen background checks for gun purchases could overcome a Republican blockade.”

But Durbin didn’t mention that the accused shooter in Buffalo had actually passed a background check when he bought the firearm allegedly used in the attack. Only after the purchase, according to authorities, was the weapon apparently modified, and the suspect acquired full-capacity magazines, which are already illegal in New York state.

Translation: Nothing Durbin mentioned would have prevented the Buffalo shooting. Durbin’s three anti-gun Democrat colleagues think their new bill will fix that. At least, that’s what they are asserting.

“The Federal Firearms Licensing Act would put in place a certification process that includes firearm safety training and a thorough criminal background and identity check requiring the licensee be 21 years of age,” Menendez said in Booker’s news release. “We have a moral obligation to prevent these senseless massacres in our schools, supermarkets, places of worship and shopping malls that are tearing communities and families apart. It is my hope that my Republican colleagues will once-and-for-all recognize the urgency of action and join us in passing this legislation before more lives are senselessly lost to gun violence.”

Elsewhere in Booker’s press release, his office reveals, “The federal firearm license must be renewed every five years at which point the applicant will have to go through a background check and undergo firearm safety training again.”

(Emphasis added) The bill contains a mechanism for the DOJ to revoke the license if the individual poses a danger to themselves or to others. It would require the Federal Bureau of Investigation to regularly conduct checks to ensure that individuals are in compliance with federal license requirements and keeps in place requirements that all people purchasing firearms from a federal firearms licensee undergo a background check.”

The New York Times editorial page is ramping up the rhetoric, blaming Republicans and Fox News' Tucker Carlson for promoting so-called "Replacement Theory" ideas, which allegedly guided the Buffalo gunman, but it is only well into the editorial that the real purpose comes clear.

"The focus on the gunman's motives should not obscure the fact that the most important step the government can take to impede similar attacks is to limit the availability of guns," the editorial states.

Essentially, the newspaper takes the country right back to the gun ban strategy.

Whether the Booker-Blumenthal-Menendez legislation has any chance may be debatable. If the U.S. Supreme Court hands down a ruling next month in New York State Rifle & Pistol Association v. Bruen that strikes down New York's extremist "good cause" carry permit requirement, the gun control movement would suffer a withering defeat.

There is another case up for review consideration by the high court, challenging a semi-auto ban in Maryland. If the court accepts that one for review, and comes down on the side of the right to keep and bear arms, it is essentially "game over" for the gun prohibition lobby, and they know it.

The Booker-Blumenthal-Menendez legislation requiring a federal license to buy or possess a firearm has long odds of passing, and even if it did, there is no doubt it would be challenged by every firearm rights organization on the map, possibly joined by other rights groups that would see some ugly writing on the wall.

PRESIDENT'S CORNER

THE NRA MEETING

K. L. Jamison

The National Rifle Association will hold its 151st General Membership meeting the last weekend of May 2022. By the time this sees print the event will have come and gone. It is still worth writing about.

The New York State attorney general is suing the NRA alleging a vast array of mismanagement and corruption. The suit is in New York because the NRA incorporated there in 1871. New York veterans of "The Late Unpleasantness" mused about the poor marksmanship of the Union troops and set up the NRA to correct the problem.

The judge has told the attorney general that she cannot dissolve the NRA. She can litigate it to the point that it has no money for other projects. There is some fear that she could appoint overseers to destroy the NRA under the pretext of saving it.

Accusations of mismanagement and waste by the current leadership of the NRA do not need to be rehashed here. Given these accusations it is astonishing that there have been no serious violations of our rights and some expansion of our rights.

Restore the NRA is an organization designed to reform the NRA management. It is a legal defense fund begun by Phil Journey, a legislator, an activist, and NRA board member and now a Kansas judge. I have known him for years and can vouch for his dedication to the cause.

LtCol West is being touted as a replacement for Wayne LaPierre. We have taken no position on this contest. We do have a position on the aftermath. After the power struggle we, the NRA, will still be under attack by the New York attorney general. We must focus on the real enemy. We must support the victor against the real enemy. This does not mean that we must ignore the needed reforms of the NRA. All organizations need review from time to time, the larger the organization, the greater the need.

The NRA must survive.

I thank-you for the honor of being your president.

"A really efficient totalitarian state would be one in which the all-powerful executive of political bosses and their army of managers control a population of slaves who do not have to be coerced, because they love their servitude. To make them love it is the task assigned, in present-day totalitarian states, to ministries of propaganda, newspaper editors and schoolteachers."

LIBERTY NOTES

By Kevin L. Jamison

It is a Good Day for Liberty.

Everyone stop and give a round of applause to Carl Smart. He took over as master of ceremonies at Rally Day. Fighting a terrible cold, he did a magnificent job.

I've read "Case of a Lifetime" by a lawyer who spent twenty years doing post-conviction relief for a woman doing life in prison as an accessory to murder. She had accompanied a man who did the murder; there was no question of that. He did other murders as well. She let him use her car. She denied being with him on the day in question. An eyewitness placed her at the scene. Eyewitnesses are notoriously unreliable. His initial statement was that he saw her at a distance, fleetingly and could not describe her or her gender. By the time of trial he was absolutely certain that she was at the scene. This happens. The lawyer describes her efforts to get the woman released. Ultimately, she was successful. She returns again and again to the question that defense lawyers get, "How can you represent guilty people?" She gives the standard answers. I have represented guilty people. My view is the same as a great Clay County defense attorney. He represented a murderer in a nasty vicious killing. The prosecution had a mountain of evidence. I heard him asked why he defended the killer and he replied, "I was just exercising my skills." Prosecutors practice their skills on guilty people, so do defense lawyers. When I have an innocent client, I will defend him with the skills I learned on the backs of guilty clients.

I'm doing Church Security legal class. Loser psychopaths attack churches because they have a grudge against religion or a person in the church. Mostly they target churches because they are perceived to be soft targets. These cowardly scum want to run up a large death toll and become famous. Many churches have formed security teams. I advise the organization of these teams and circumstances under which they can act. There must be some formal organization to demonstrate that they have the right to be on the property and armed. I advise the statement that should be made in the aftermath. There are insurance questions. Most insurance policies do not cover acts of self-defense. There are private groups that offer self-defense "insurance." It is not really insurance and not governed by the insurance commissioner. They are membership benefits. It is a complex field. It should not be, but it is.

I remember the incident in which Jesus expelled demons from a man; not personally but it has been reliably reported. I am concerned that He sent the demons into a herd of pigs. This must have spoiled the meat. As a good Jewish boy Jesus may not have been overly concerned. I hate to see bacon wasted. It does show that some sacrifices must be made.

The 9th Circuit Court of Appeals has ruled that California cannot deny 18 to 21 year olds the right to buy rifles and shotguns. This is good, but not great. What usually happens in the 9th Circuit is that the case is re-heard by the entire court and the decision reversed. Still, every little bit helps.

Russia invaded the Ukraine believing it would be over in 72 hours. Seventy-two days later they were retreating. Reports are that Mariupol has fallen and the last holdouts in the steelworks have given up. Other reports say that the severely wounded have given up and there are still holdouts including the senior officers in the maze of tunnels under the steelworks. This teaches us that it is only necessary to hold out to the last possible second.

The Ukrainians have killed a dozen Russian generals. They were able to do so because the generals got on radio and telephone networks and did not use communications security measures that I learned as a Second Lieutenant; because the Russians were listening. This is a lesson for us because the usual suspects monitor our communications. Things said in jest become evidence that we are bloodthirsty monsters. An NRA field representative told me that she walked out of a legislative meeting reporting the results to her boss on her cell phone. Then she discovered that one of the opposition was following her and listening to everything that she said.

The Russians have been employing old equipment in the current war, stuff that doesn't use the computer chips they can no longer get. I have even seen reports that Russian soldiers have been given 1891 Mosin Nagent rifles left over from WW II. I find this difficult to believe. They may have brought out sniper rifles based on the old rifle of course.

There have been many reports of Ukrainian civilians obtaining weapons to resist the Russians. I have not seen reports of these civilians in action. They have been reported as manning security positions to guard against sabotage. This releases soldiers for other duties. I look forward to future histories.

A racist scum murdered people in a New York state grocery store. He left behind a screed in which he declared that he selected the New York state location because the state's restrictive gun laws made it unlikely that someone would shoot back. In the event a security guard shot back. The scum was wearing body armor. The impact may have distracted the scum and saved some lives, but the guard was killed. The scum deliberately used the same model of AR 15 rifle used in the Sandy Hook massacre. He hoped to increase demands for gun restrictions. It seems the scum got his wish.

The scum-sucking racist surrendered when police arrive. This is rare. These are normally suicide missions. The scum-sucking racist wore body armor. We have to work on our head shots. Of course, calling him a scum-sucking racist implies there is some other kind of racist. There is not.

The Missouri legislature ended its session a day early, a very rare occurrence. It also ended without taking up our bill to reduce the number of gun-free zones and other provisions. The bill was delayed going through the session because one provision ended sales tax on guns and ammunition. This required it to go through the finance committee. Trying for that extra bit of perfection may have cost us the bill.

The usual suspects claim our bill failed because they showed up. They did show up and made the usual arguments. The difference this year was the hatred they showed for us and our rights. I do not suggest that we respond in kind, quite the contrary. I suggest that we must show up. Our legislators may not, in many cases, be very smart, but they can count.

This year's Gun Rights Policy Conference will be 28 September through 2 October, 2022 at the Westin-Dallas Ft. Worth Airport Hotel in Irving Texas. Details at newsletterSAF.org. The conference is hosted by the Second Amendment Foundation. There will be a host of speakers on current Second Amendment issues. The conference is free but attendees must pay their own transport and lodging. The SAF has a deal for rooms which can be reserved through their website. The conference has always been highly informative and gives away piles of books and printed materials.

The Red Cross reports a severe blood shortage. There is always a blood shortage in the winter and the pandemic and economic problems have made it worse. Give a little blood and wear your Second Amendment shirt or button when you do.

We shall overcome.
